Boxes and Grand Stand Filled
With Society Women in Smart Costumes.

MILITARY BALL IS HELD GIVES $20,000 TO ROME POOR

Dinner Parties Given by Army
Folk at Training Station
Before Dance.

Newport, Sept. 7.—All Newport was out today at the opening of the Newport horse show at the Casino. Many of the women appeared in attractive costumes, with touches of color in the girdle or hat. A few of those who were attractively attired were Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Dudley Davis and Mrs. Joseph Widener.

There were four dinner parties at the Naval Training Station prior to a military ball, which was a feature of the Labor day programme there. Those entertaining were Capt. and Mrs. Roger Wolles, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. Frank Taylor Evans, Lieut. and Mrs. J. R. Morrison and Paymaster George W. Pagan Jr.

At 8 o'clock this evening Mrs. J. J. Mason gave a dinner in honor of her guest, Miss Louise Webb of New York, and Mrs. Lewis Quinlan Jones was a guest at the dinner.

Registered at the Casino to-day were Miss Ruth King, New York, guest of Mrs. Lawrence L. Gillette; Henry R. Sedgwick, guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sedgwick; E. J. Curley 2d, New York, visiting Dr. J. J. Mason; S. W. Riddle, Glen Riddle Farms, Pa.; R. W. Riddle, Philadelphia; J. G. Lelper, Jr., L. W. Riddle, Philadelphia; E. P. Pearson, Newport; R. L. E. D. Beardsman, Boston, visiting William Earl Dodge.

The old officers of the Newport Yacht Racing Association will hold over for another year due to the lack of a quorum at the annual meeting to-day.

Rear Admiral William B. Caperton left for Philadelphia to-day after visiting his family at the Muenchinger King. Mrs. Caperton and Miss Marguerite Caperton will stay here for some time longer.

Mrs. George T. Bliss of New York is to remain at the Lillard Spencer Villa until late in the fall.

George L. Scott is the guest of his brother, Harry Scott, at his Connecticut farm.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Rollins Morse are visiting in Texas.

P. A. B. Widener left for New York on the steam yacht Josephine today and Henry Walters has returned to New York on the Narada. Ex-Senator Nelson W. Aldrich has returned to Warwick Neck on the Nirvana.

The feature of the day at the horse show was the performance of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's new chestnut mare, Lady Warley, which carried off two firsts, that for the best novice single horse shown in harness and that for the best lady's horse. Another new horse of Mr. Vanderbilt's, Flares, took the first in the class for novices.

H. C. Taylor's stables also came to the front, winning first in the class for novice pairs and second for the class for novice single horses. Edward B. McLean's saddle horse, High Ball, was also a very consistent performer and a winner. Another Newport victory was that of Maurice Roche's team in the class for four.

Reynold G. Vanderbilt had things his own way in the class for brood mares. He was the only exhibitor and, therefore, with three fine looking mares, took the three prizes offered.

The class for single horses, ladies to drive, stirred up much enthusiasm. Miss Eleanor Sears and Mrs. Belle Beach Rahn appeared in the ring driving the Alfred G. Vanderbilt entries and they carried off the chief honors. Miss Sears, driving Mr. Vanderbilt's Lady Warley, took the blue and Mrs. Rahn, driving Grace, took second. The third in the class went to Mrs. Burke Roche's Solitaire.

WEDDINGS.

Stark-Stough.

Mrs. Bertha Condon Stough, a concert and opera singer, at one time a pupil of Miss Emma Thursby, was married yesterday to Dr. Harry H. Stark of El Paso, Tex., at the Elmhurst Hotel. The Rev. L. A. Harvey, pastor of the Fourth Universal Church, Brooklyn, performed the ceremony. Miss Josephine Conrad of Philadelphia was the maid of honor. The bride was given away by her nephew, Edmund B. Branson. After the wedding a breakfast was served.

Howell-Hoffer.

Mrs. Jean Jackson Hoffer of St. Petersburg, Fla., was married to Warner R. Howell of Philadelphia yesterday at noon in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church. The Rev. James Lawrence of the parish performed the ceremony and the parish was present. Miss Isabel Howell, a daughter of the bridegroom, was the bridesmaid and Lambert Whetstone was the best man. A wedding breakfast followed at the Biltmore. After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Howell will live at Germantown, Pa.

MISS HYDE A BRIDE ON SEPT. 19.

Will Harry Barrack A. Park in St. Andrews, Southampton.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The wedding of Miss Dorothy Hyde and Harry A. Park will take place on Saturday, September 19, at 1 o'clock at St. Andrews Church, Southampton. Miss Hyde's bridesmaids will be Mrs. Dorothy Hyde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, and Miss Elsie Park, sister of the bridegroom.

Mr. Park's best man will be his brother, James Park, who has been in the army since the outbreak of the war. The bride will be given away by her brother, Mr. O. McKean, Chase H. Davis, Erskine Wood, George W. L. Meyer, Jr., Walter Ford, Humphrey Parsons, Thomas Frothingham, Samuel M. Felton, Carlton Hurd, Oswald Wood, Lewis Park, H. Godfrey Hyde.

Mr. Park gave his bachelor dinner at the Meadow Brook Club on Saturday last.

Miss Jackson to Wed.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Dorothy Jackson, daughter of Mrs. B. W. Jackson of Boston, to Harwood Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Oliver of this city. Miss Jackson commenced her studies at the Chamberlain School in Boston last June, and shortly afterward went to Europe with her father, expecting to pass a year there. She returned to this city recently. Mr. Oliver is an undergraduate at Harvard. The wedding will probably take place next June.

CARDINAL FARLEY RECEIVED BY POPE

Pontiff Sends Blessing to People of New York and Praises America.

MARCHIAFAVA SAYS DEATH OF PIUS X. WAS SERENE—DE- SCRIBES LAST HOURS.

Special Cable Despatch to The Sun.
Rome, Sept. 7.—Pope Benedict gave $20,000 to-day to the poor of Rome.

Cardinal Farley of New York, accompanied by Mr. John Edwards and Bishop Patrick Hayes, also of New York, had an audience with the Pope this afternoon. The Pontiff was much interested in hearing about their work at home and sent his blessing to the people of New York. He praised America in the highest terms and talked with Cardinal Farley about the conclave when the two sat together at meals.

Referring to the war, the Pope said that he fears that all Europe will be involved and he regretted that he is powerless to hasten peace.

Cardinal Farley said that the Pope's affection was most brotherly and that the pontiff embraced and kissed him and would not allow him to kneel.

Cardinal Farley will sail for New York on September 14 from Naples on the French Line steamer St. Anna. Cardinals Gibbons and O'Connell will sail on the Canopic on September 10.

LAST HOURS OF THE POPE.

Dr. Marchiafava Tells of Pontiff's
Illness and Death.

Special Correspondence to The Sun.
Rome, Aug. 21.—The following interview with Dr. Marchiafava, published in the Corriere d'Italia, is the only authentic account of the Pope's illness and death.

"First of all I must say that during these last weeks the Pope suffered a great deal on account of the war," said Dr. Marchiafava. "He often told me and the members of his entourage that Europe was being covered with blood and his grief was considerable. The fact that the war was inevitable depressed and weakened him. I strived to comfort him, but it was useless, as war news increased his sadness and sorrow."

"Your Holiness should not be depressed, as your health is precious to the church, to the world and especially to us Americans," I used to tell him. He smiled sadly and his pity came from his eyes and illuminated his face and he answered: "What am I to do, dear professor? Millions of men are being killed. I tried to prevent it but failed. All that is left for me now is sorrow. If I do not think about the safety of so many young lives, the flower of humanity, who else should? I have the highest ministry of peace and yet—"

"His eyes filled with tears and every day it was the same. He spoke about the war to me, to his sisters, to the prelates of his court, to the who came to him. Every one tried in vain to comfort him. But his soul was bleeding and could not remain insensible to the gravity of what was happening. His grief increased to such a point that he was bowed down physically and depressed him morally. And yet he was so strong when death came."

"His illness came on not so suddenly, but with the rapidity of a thunderbolt. It struck him at a most critical period of depression. His constitution, that had resisted other serious illnesses, now yielded, and he fell ill. He suffered from sorrow for this great slaughter. I cannot say that death was hastened owing to his great sorrow, but he certainly could not have resisted more had he not felt such grief."

"Recently his pulse had been irregular and he became subject to chronic catarrhal complaints, from which formerly he had recovered. He followed his cure. This time as soon as he was taken ill his condition was serious. His recovery from the first was hopeless, his death a question of a few hours. On Sunday, August 19, the Pope was very ill. I visited him and warned every one of the danger. For five days he suffered only from the usual catarrh, but the catarrh became feverish and his respiration became very quick."

"He complained of pains throughout his body, especially in the chest. Still he wanted to work as usual and I permitted him to do so. He returned to his room. When I left him on Saturday, August 15, it was the last time I saw him as he used to be when he was well. The fever increased the following day and on the next, but his condition was not serious until Monday. He said he felt better and left his bed, but in the evening the fever still rose and his weakness increased."

"On Tuesday he was worse; still he wanted to leave his bed and work. I warned Cardinal Merry del Val and the other cardinals, but they returned to the Vatican and found the Pope had a complete collapse. He was still conscious but very weak."

"He received the last sacraments with calm and was prompted to his secretary the words of absolute when he was administering the Viaticum. He was moved to tears. Then he blessed us all, signed the crucifix and returned to his bed. At 2 P. M. he appeared to be slightly better and he asked me to give him some coffee and milk. Within a short time he fell back into his former condition. "How does your Holiness feel?" I asked him. "Better, thanks," he replied. He grew worse rapidly. I left the Vatican at 8 o'clock, the evening and returned at 11 o'clock. I found him still worse. He was entirely unconscious. I notified every one that the catastrophe was imminent. I placed a crucifix between his hands, which he kissed. He opened his eyes and looked around and then expired. I never saw any one die so serenely."

CRANE SAYS ENGLAND HAS NOW WAKED UP

Actor Tells of Supreme British Confidence in Early Stages of War.

Among those who have just come back from England is William H. Crane, actor. He has been there since August 1, waiting for a chance to get home and making use of his time also in watching the British get ready for war. The attitude of the British had been one of supreme confidence, he says, and it wasn't until they saw their army pushed back that they put aside their flannels and put on khaki.

It was while Mr. Crane was in the ocean that word came of the fall of Namur and the retreat of the allies in the direction of Paris.

"There must be a different spirit in the United Kingdom now than there was when I was there," said Mr. Crane last night. "Their confidence amounted to almost indifference. They simply couldn't believe that things could go wrong. They contented themselves with assuring one another that the Kaiser is simply crazy. And when his armies began to beat back their troops it was 'well, that's just a fluke,' and when it happened again it was, 'we are not quite ready yet.'"

"I take it that England has waked up now. It was great Britain that got the other two allies to agree that none would make peace without the two others. And that simply means that she is going to fight to the finish and that she will stake everything she has."

"When I left Liverpool you could hardly have told me a war. Cricket grounds were full and men strolled about in their flannels without a worry. While things were going wrong on the Continent, in London many theatres were closed and war was much evidenced by the massing of troops."

"There seems to be a great dread and suspicion of all Germans in England. Britishers feel that their land is infested with German spies. Many of the hotels in London were run by Germans. They and their German help have been forced to leave, but otherwise there is not much break in hotel life."

"The Londoners have to walk pretty often in their flannels without a worry. While things were going wrong on the Continent, in London many theatres were closed and war was much evidenced by the massing of troops."

LABOR UNIONS PICNIC INSTEAD OF PARADING

10,000 at Festival—Hoboes See Woman's Play Based on Soup.

The principal event of labor's festival yesterday, from the viewpoint of the trade unions, which ought to know, was the picnic and games of the 300 and odd unions of the Central Federated Union at the Manhattan Casino, 156th street and Eighth avenue, which took the place of the customary parade. Crowds of men, women and children began to gather at 2 P. M. and by evening it was estimated that 10,000 persons were present.

The unions of shirtwaist, neckwear, white goods, laundry, skirt and other organizations of women workers affiliated with the Women's Trade Union League as an organization was represented by a committee consisting of Miss Margaret Hinckley and Miss Mary Costigan.

By way of celebrating Labor Day a benefit entertainment was given yesterday under the auspices of the hobo organization, the Brotherhood Welfare Association, at Floral Garden Hall, 74 East Fourth street, at which a four act play was a part of the programme. The actors were hoboes, who volunteered for the different parts, the acting being not strictly regarded as work.

The play, which was written by Miss Cora Harvey, secretary of the association, shows several men working in a field as harvesters, who afterward arrive in New York as hoboes. One is arrested for sleeping in a church, another for sleeping in a car and a third for sleeping in the subway. All are charged with vagrancy and sent to what the writer of the play calls "Whitewash Island," where they go on strike against the quality of the soup. The hobo heroes are finally discharged by a judge who tastes of the soup.

LEE MCCLUNG IS ILL.

Former U. S. Treasurer Has Typhoid in London.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Lee McClung, Treasurer of the United States under President Taft, is critically ill in a hospital here from typhoid fever.

Thomas Lee McClung was also treasurer of Yale, a post he held for years before President Taft chose him for the post in Washington. He was successful in adapting new accounting methods to the executive offices of Yale. He came there from the Southern Railway and was also director of the New Haven National Bank and of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company of Hartford.

Mr. McClung was born in Knoxville, Tenn., in 1870. He was graduated from Yale in 1892 and was one of the great football players of his day. He played with Heffelfinger on the team which was never scored on in 1891.

CHARLES E. RECTOR IMPROVES.

Physicians Expect Complete Recovery of Restaurant Owner.

SHANNON, Sept. 7.—Charles E. Rector, restaurant and hotel man, who built the Hotel Rector, 40 Broadway and Forty-fourth street, New York, and who has been very ill at his home on the Rumson road, is much better to-day.

His physicians said that Mr. Rector, they expected, would soon recover his usual health. He took the treatment at Bad Nauheim, returning from Europe in April apparently slightly improved.

Robert J. Collier Improved.

Robert J. Collier, who has been seriously ill at his home, 752 Park avenue, was reported by his physicians to be much improved yesterday.

Swift & Company's sales of beef in New York City for the week ending September 6th averaged as follows: Domestic Beef, 12.21 cents; Imported Beef, 11.57 cents per pound.—Ad.

MRS. RICHARD CROKER JOSEPH MILBANK WHO IS DEAD IN AUSTRIA GAVE MILLIONS, DEAD

Telegram Reaches London
Telling of Her Death in a Village.

COMMUNICATION CUT OFF END AT COUNTRY HOME

Ex-Leader of Tammany Unable to Get Facilities to Reach Village.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Mrs. Richard Croker, wife of the former Tammany chieftain of New York, was reported dead in a telegram received to-day from a village in the interior of Austria.

Mr. Croker has been unable to arrange for any facilities to reach the village and does not know whether or not her body will be buried there or sent on here.

At the home of ex-Fire Chief Edward F. Croker it was said last night that a cablegram had been received from Richard Croker announcing the death of the latter's wife in Austria.

Mrs. Richard Croker, who was married to the former leader of Tammany in 1873, was Miss Elizabeth Fraser, daughter of Samuel Fraser of New York. She had been graduated from a convent only a brief time when she became the bride of Mr. Croker, who was then a ward politician.

Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Croker and five of them are dead. Three died at an early age. Frank H. Croker was killed in 1905 in an automobile accident in Florida. Herbert Croker died a little later in the same year on a train in Kansas. The youngest son, Howard, was gravely ill last year but recovered. He is 26 years old. Richard, Jr., the eldest son, is 37. There are two daughters, Ethel and Florence. In 1906 Florence was married to Count Louis San Martino of Naples.

Mrs. Croker was a devout Catholic and sent all of her children to Jesuit schools. She was always sensitive to the publicity which came to her husband because of his political prominence. The incessant political strife distressed her and then came a breaking up of the Croker home. Mr. Croker finally made his home at Glencairn, Ireland, near Dublin, where he still lives on his big estate.

Mrs. Croker spent her last years in the south of France with her two daughters and then it was that Miss Florence Croker eloped with the Italian count. The Croker home, at 6 East Seventy-fourth street, was advertised for sale, but a sale never took place. The home was renovated and in 1904 Mrs. Croker and her sons took up their abode there again. In 1907 a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Croker was reported.

Mrs. Croker shared actively with her husband in gifts to charity. In 1904 they gave $1,000 to a dozen charities in this city as a memorial to their son Frank.

Mrs. Croker was a member of the Union League Club, the Hiding Club, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Hardware Club.

He is survived by two sons, Dunlop of Port Chester, N. Y., and Jeremiah of Greenwich, Conn.

Lewis P. Clark.

BOUND BROOK, N. J., Sept. 7.—Lewis P. Clark died to-day, aged 89. He once had charge of the toll road between New York and Bound Brook. For many years he had celebrated his birthday by giving a banquet for his fellow members in Eastern Star Lodge, F. & A. M., and American Hotel, New York, for fifty years married, his wives being sisters.

Rosanna M. Nagle.

Rosanna M. Nagle, widow of Col. Garrett Nagle of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, died yesterday at her home, 167 East Sixty-fourth street, after an illness of six years. Mrs. Nagle was 62 years old. She has been prominent for many years in Catholic charity work and was a patroness of the New York Foundling Asylum. Her niece is married to Cardinal Farley's nephew, Philip Farley. The funeral will be held to-day at St. Ignace's Church, Eighty-fourth street and Park avenue.

William H. Bryant.

WASHINGTON, N. J., Sept. 7.—William H. Bryant, a contractor and erected two-thirds of all the houses and every factory in this town, died Saturday, aged 72 years. He was a member of the Washington Methodist church for fifty years and a trustee at the time of his death.
